Save Vitality

These hundreds of thousands of young chaps who are returning to their jobs of working, of playing, of loving and of being loved, could in this flush of their jubilant health do no better thing than to attach this ancient reminder securely to the tablets of their memory:

"Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth, ere the evil days draw nigh."

This is no exordium to righteousness.

It is a homely little hint about preserving your health, young man; a health that today seems as abounding as the eternal waters of the River of Life.

Health is something you care nothing about until it is mislaid; like your toothbrush, or your fountain pen.

But at forty, or fifty, or thereabouts, the average husky will stop and listen a bit.

Listen to the rumble of a protesting heart.

Listen to the jar of a kidney gone bad.

Listen to the whistle of a lung that has picked up a tack on the great white way.

Believe us we know what we are talking about when we say that no material thing in this life is worth anything compared to the healthful body's power to do each day and job necessary.

Believe us also when we remark that right now, in the virile twenties, is the time to determine the sort of time you are going to have living with yourself twenty years from now.

It is easy to keep your vigor; about all you need to do is to be half way sane in your habits; habits of work as well of play; but for every little overdraft you send in now on your health balance you will have an accounting that will amaze you.

Before universal military training for the younger men brought us up to efficiency this country was becoming a place of old young men. Chaps who coughed, who went about with caved-in chests; chaps who peered at a drab world through thick lenses; chaps who were half men, and who had drifted into that sort of a state through neglect and who were candidates for the down and out club at 45.

There is no reason on earth why the average man should not do a day's work at 75.

And if from 21 to 31 the youth would pay half as much attention to keeping fit as he does to any of half a dozen little habits or hobbies that most men have, he would at sixty be ready to start life over, if he had to.

Ten minutes each day deep breathing! two hours brisk walking over the country once a week, and elimination of excesses, would store up much of the surplus energy of thoughtless twenty for the wise use of experienced fifty.

All this isn't important; no more than making yourself a present of an added twenty enjoyable years of life.

And believe us we know what we are talking about when we remark that life really is hardly worth enduring when heart pounds, and lungs wheeze, and stomach revolts, and kidneys protest, and you have to coddle yourself, and wear rubbers, and plasters on your chest, and sniffle whenever you stop by an open window.

Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth, and save some of that vitality.

You will require it if you are to die contented.

Sweets Will Help

When prohibition is really here, and all the parodies on Crossing the Bar have become sad realities, a lot of very decent people are going to find themselves nervous and irritable as the result of their inability to get the little drink to which they have become accustomed.

Since this is so, it may not come amiss to know something about food substitutes for liquor. The best of these is sugar, especially in candy form. All alcohol is made from some member of the sugar family, so the drinker who takes to the candy box simply substitutes the father for the child.

If the man who is in the habit of taking a drink regularly before dinner, or in the middle of the day, will eat two or three pieces of candy, preferably sweet chocolate, he will find the craving for a drink will disappear, his nerves will get the desired stimulation, but with this better result; the sugar stimulant will not be followed by the prostration which follows any alcoholic drink, and which, while not recognized ordinarily as prostration, is responsible for that feeling commonly referred to as "one drink hollering for another"—the real cause of every case of drunkenness since Noah.

Pleanty of candy, then, is indicated for the man who finds it hard to "swear off," and in addition to candy, nourishing meals with a good share of starchy foods which will turn into sugar in process of digestion. Sweet deserts, too, are good. All these will help to smooth the jagged nerves, and make the process of reformation less fearsome to the man himself, and to his friends who must live with him during the process.

The President of the Senate

For thirty-seven years northern Arizona has known A. A. Johns, now president of the state senate. Gradually during this long period of residence in Arizona the rest of the state has come to know him. Today he is "Tony" to thousands from the northern to the southern boundaries and from New Mexico to California.

Mr. Johns came to Arizona in 1882 at the age of eighteen years. His first work was in the mines of Yavapai county, but he had seen much of the United States in reaching this job. He fell in love with Yavapai in particular and with Arizona in general, and except for a few years when the wanderlust called, he remained true to the county and state.

His story is that of every other successful pioneer—hard work in many enterprises, hard knocks overcome, a gradual forging to the front in the state's affairs, and finally a measure of success and satisfaction. Mr. Johns has been a good citizen, a good business man, a good politician. He is now proving that experience and pioneering combine to make timber for a good presiding officer in the state senate.

No one but a statesman could understand the logic of sending delegates to meet the representatives of a bolshevik government whose existence we refuse to acknowledge.

The Huns demand that we recognize their new government. It is so much like the old one that we could hardly fail to recognize it.

The ignorant man justly blames society for his poverty, for society was to blame for his ignorance.

Those fourteen points have a different appearance when Germany turns them the other way.

That new soul acquired by Germany smells of the same old brimstone.

Self-determination is ranging in Rumania.

SENATE HIGHWAYS BILL IS VETOED BY GOVERNOR CAMPBELL

Executive Declares Purpose of Measure Is to Clip His Wings

(By Review Leased Wire)
PHOENIX, Ariz., Mar. 6.—"I guess the senate will sleep overnight on it," was the reply of President Johns of the senate to a query as to whether there would be any immediate action on Governor Campbell's message of the morning vetoing the senate highway bill with its $3,000,000 appropriation for two years and $200,000 to obtain federal aid.

In a lengthy message which dealt with his every view of the situation, the governor expressed his disapproval of senate bill 17 and its provisions, as he expressed them, to "clip his wings" by placing the appointing of a highways commission in the hands of a board of five, himself, the state treasurer, secretary of state, president of the senate and speaker of the house. He called the bill an attempt to build "a self-perpetuating political machine with autocratic powers and no check upon its expenditures."

Opening his message Governor Campbell outlined his views on a state highway department as carried in his earlier message on the third day of the session, in which he favored a commission of five without pay, a term of office of five years, one retiring each year.

Good Roads Demanded
"There is an insistent demand for good roads," said the governor, "but equally insistent is the demand that the highway department shall not be made the political adjunct of any man or set of men to further personal or partisan purposes."

"Seven years under statehood finds us with no definite road policy and with no roads despite the expenditure of millions. There must be a change. Senate bill 17 does not and would not remedy the situation, but aggravates it and provides at the expense of the long suffering and forbearing taxpayers a self-perpetuating political machine with autocratic powers and no check upon its expenditures by the chief executive or anyone else. The voters at the last election entrusted me with certain responsibilities of state including the conduct of a number of departments. This expression of the polls is capable of only one interpretation, that I am the one to whom they look to supervise and safeguard their affairs. Neither infatuation, cajolery, threat of further 'clipping of wings,' 'making the lion roar,' nor holding up the vital business of state will swerve me from my course."

Resents Provision

"There has been no demand from the people that any of the powers I possess be taken away from me, as is attempted by senate bill 17. On the other hand a mandate did come to your body from the good roads convention, composed of high class men, and representing every section of the state, asking for the enactment of road legislation along the lines I advocated in my message to you. In addition men managing property representing nearly 70 per cent of our taxable wealth voted the same request."

The governor then proceeded to classify his objections to the vetoed bill under two heads, moral and legal. "Under this arrangement," the message continued, "the governor is one of five members, four of whom are opposed to him politically. It can be readily seen that he is thus placed in a position in which his hands are tied. The so-called highway bill appoints a commission and delegates to it practically unlimited powers to it. With this ruthless disposition of authority the governor is left helpless, although held in the minds of the people to strict accountability for the successful conduct of the departments affairs."

Utah Case Cited
"Utah has a commission similar to the one proposed by this legislature but experience has demonstrated its impracticability."

"The bill presents several flagrant violations of the state constitution." The message next quotes article III of the state constitution relating to the legislative branch of the state government and outlining the duties of the chief executive.

On the proposal to name the heads of the house and senate on the highway board, the governor quoted again from the constitution that "no person holding any public office of profit or trust shall be a member of the legislature" and added excerpts from numerous court decisions to support his contention.

The powers of the proposed highway engineer are criticized in that he is empowered under the commission to enter into contracts with the federal government, the opinion being expressed, "I do not believe there can be any doubt about the proposition that if this bill stands it would entirely destroy the constitutional power of the governor to transact the executive business of the state with the United States. To that extent it is unconstitutional. The violation of the constitution in this respect would also probably result in the loss of federal aid for roads in this state, which under present congressional legislation, will amount to nearly $4,000,000 in the next three years."

JUDGE J. L. WINTERS RETURNS FROM MINE INSPECTION JOURNEY

Lowell Gold Property at Horseshoe Bend Promising, Says Engineer

Judge J. L. Winters and a party of friends returned Monday from a few days' visit to the Lowell Gold Mining company, which is situated at Horseshoe bend in the Quijeta mountains, 30 miles west of Tucson. After viewing the claims, of which there are six, covering an area of 160 acres, the judge said he is more confident than ever over the ultimate results which he thinks will be most satisfactory to every stockholder.

A Lane Chillian mill with a capacity of 30 tons a day has been purchased and it will be installed within 45 days. The company expects to commence milling with as little delay as possible.

According to the report made after a complete test of the property, J. Hibbs, mining engineer, said the properties and assays from 20 cents to $1,700 at ten feet. Traces on the claims show that in olden times there has been extracted millions of dollars of gold placer by the Indians and Spanish.

Hibbs sampled the properties and in his report stated he found a vein traceable on the surface for 300 feet, and on this vein is a shaft about 40 feet and after taking a sample it showed $18.40 and the engineer said that with ordinary grading it can be made to run $50 rock. No ledges in the district are frozen and all are wider in depth than at the surface. Ore predominates in the Cube Iron, he declared. The officers of the company are: J. L. Winters, president, and F. C. Fenderson, secretary-treasurer.

HARBOR STRIKE UNCHANGED

(By Review Leased Wire)
NEW YORK, Mar. 6.—Settlement of the strike of the Marine Workers' of America which has paralyzed traffic in New York harbor since it began Tuesday morning was still hanging fire tonight. James L. Hughes, a mediator for the federal department of labor, after conferring with representatives of the railroad administration, which operates 40 per cent of the 1901 piers and docks up and down the harbor, presented a new wage and hour schedule presented was so complicated, however, that a hasty analysis of the union leaders brought the statement from them that some sections needed interpretation and that a counter proposition would be submitted tomorrow.

MANY DEBATES ARE EXPUNGED FROM THE RECORDS IN HOUSE

Objection to Winsor Election Bill One of Resolutions Ruled Out

(By Review Leased Wire)
PHOENIX, Ariz., Mar. 6.—Motions to expunge resolutions and debates from the records were popular in the house today.

The first matter which was aired and which was not permitted to get on the official files was a resolution brought in by Eddy, scoring the Phoenix Gazette for its articles on the senate highway bill and the attitude of certain members of the house on that measure. The resolution branded as incorrect statements made by the newspaper and concluded with the assertion that that paper did not represent the views of the democratic party in the state.

The republicans in the house to a man resented the implication that the Gazette should be read out of the democratic party and gained such support that a motion to place Eddy's resolution on the records was defeated. It finally being decided to expunge all reference to the affair.

In the afternoon Galbraith objected to the method adopted of reading Winsor's election code for the third time and made a motion to get his objection on the house books. This also was expunged.

The election code is a bulky affair and it was decided to have four members read it simultaneously, each taking certain sections. The result was that while the other members awaited the conclusion of this necessary form, four representatives sat, each in a corner of the house, apparently talking to themselves, but really reading in conversational tone their particular portions of the code. Galbraith thought this was not living up to the letter of the law and moved accordingly.

When the quadruple reading was concluded the bill was passed with but little debate, the vote being 20 to 14. Barrows explained his "no" vote by his objection to a measure which classed as a felony the making of an anonymous statement and put bribery and forgery in the category of misdemeanor.

With Winsor's election code out of the way, Galbraith tried to obtain reconsideration of Howard's party convention measure, which was indefinitely postponed yesterday, but he failed to get the necessary support.

WHOLESALE ROBBERY IN ARMY DISCOVERED; 10 ARRESTED IN PARIS

Sergeants Maintained Store to Sell Stolen Goods, Is Charged

(By Review Leased Wire)
PARIS, March 6.—The police have arrested two sergeants of the American, three Armenians, two Belgians and three Frenchmen in connection with the theft of American army stores.

The robberies are so extensive, according to police, that a store was maintained to sell the goods.

Boxes Create Suspicion
Madame Moisan, caretaker of the house at 23 Rue de Pontoise, had her attention attracted by the great number of boxes of all sorts which were brought there. The boxes were carried in automobiles and motor trucks and the job of keeping them were superintended by a civilian who spoke French with an American accent and who wore a lapel button with the letters "U. S."

The stolen goods, the police discovered, were put through a transforming process and were taken out through a house at 16 Rue St. Victor on the other side of the block. The trade in the stolen goods, it is said, has been brisk since September.

Caught Loading Trucks

Police Inspector Cazel was watching the house on Monday and arrested two of the Armenians as they were loading 3,000 pounds of chocolate on trucks. Inspector Legrand joined in the investigation and found that the trail of the robbers led to the American warehouses. The police then arrested Sergeant Maurice Meyers of Boston and Sergeant Andrew Gleason of New York. The soldiers denied all knowledge of the thefts.

The police declare that the sergeants worked by a simple but effective system. They charged them with giving orders to drivers to load the chocolate at various warehouses and to take it to the house in the Rue de Pontoise. A truck driver named Baird, according to the police, identified sergeants as having given him orders to transport chocolate. Baird was exonerated of all blame and was not arrested.

A suit filed by Chris Tomich to recover $165.75 from Mike Ellich, said to be owing Tomich for work done during the month of September, 1917, was heard in Judge J. Allison's court yesterday. The case was continued until this morning at 11 o'clock for the hearing of more evidence. According to the evidence submitted by the plaintiff yesterday, Ellich employed Tomich to build a concrete basement under his home. The work was completed and Tomich sent his bill to Ellich for $165.75, no part of which has been paid, it is asserted.
